

Cost of Care Resources

The cost of cancer care can be a burden, especially combined with the emotional strain of a cancer diagnosis. These financial challenges can be difficult to understand.

Patients often only access financial resources near the end of their treatment rather than the start. It's never too late to learn, but getting the information earlier can help manage the financial impact of cancer. That is why we've gathered the useful resources listed below to help.*

Emotional Distress and Stigma of Financial Hardship

The psychosocial stigma and distress of financial hardship can place a heavy emotional toll on patients. Here are some resources to help your patients cope with this burden:

Healthcare Provider Financial Navigation Training

Nurse Navigators, Social Workers, Financial Coordinators, and other support staff are often the most critical piece of the insurance, cost, reimbursement puzzle for a patient. Historically, there was never formal training on financial resource navigation and insurance counseling. However, that has changed in recent years with several professional and advocacy organizations offering courses, content, and certificate programs in effective healthcare financial navigation. Some of these are listed here and will offer a wealth of information:
